

The image is a technical architectural drawing of a window detail. It features a central window opening with a double-pane structure. The interior of the window is filled with fine, parallel hatching lines. The window is set within a frame, and the surrounding area is defined by various lines representing structural elements. In the corners of the drawing, there are several small, tilted rectangular shapes, likely representing decorative moldings or hardware. The overall style is clean and technical, typical of architectural blueprints.
